Advantages:

- Often faster than litigation.
- Cheaper and more flexible for businesses.
- When the dispute is highly technical, arbitrators with an appropriate degree of expertise can be appointed (one cannot "choose the judge" in litigation).
- Proceedings and an arbitral award are generally non-public, and can be made confidential.
- Flexibility to choose the language of arbitral proceedings, whereas in judicial proceedings the official language of the country of the competent court will be automatically applied.
- Arbitration awards are generally easier to enforce in other nations than court judgments.
- Limited avenues for recourse of an arbitral award, which is sometimes an advantage because it limits the duration of the dispute and any associated liability.

The Dimensions of Conflict

1. The Conflict Core

THE CONFLICT CORE AND CONFLICT SPREAD

The diagram consists of a central circle labeled 'Conflict Core'. This core is surrounded by several concentric layers or rings, representing the 'Conflict Spread'. The layers are interconnected, suggesting a complex and multi-faceted nature of conflict. The diagram is presented on a slide within a presentation software interface.
